You...and this Company have a big job ahead –

we must check pollution in the South!

All of us . . . individuals, cities, counties, industry . . . must join in the battle to check pollution of our streams. If we continue to foul our supply of water, all of us will suffer.

Realizing this great need, Pomona Pipe Products has broadened its services in the sanitation field. In addition to the sanitary sewer pipe which we have been selling for generations, we now carry a complete line of other sanitation equipment, such as sewage pumping stations, treatment plants, chlorination equipment, etc.

Our technical staff is ready to help with all phases of sanitation planning, including financing and federal programs. We welcome an opportunity to be of assistance on any problem which you may have regarding waste disposal.

DR. ROBERT C. EDWARDS, PRESIDENT

CLEMSON UNIVERSITY

The Clemson University campus you visit today is experiencing a dramatic and dynamic period of emergence and development. As the state's land-grant institution, Clemson is vigorously advancing in its three-fold mission of education, research and public service.

Founded by Thomas Green Clemson, the University has grown from a modest opening in 1893 into an outstanding educational institution that stresses quality programs in its eight undergraduate colleges and school and in its Graduate School.

President Robert C. Edwards' ambition for the future, which he sees as attainable if Clemson continues and accelerates trends of the past 10 years, is for the Clemson University of 1985 to be "a great University when measured by the most discriminating standards."

New buildings, rising on the Clemson campus at a steady rate, are only one facet of the new image, behind which surges a rededication toward enriching academic goals in keeping with the University's distinguished history of contributions to American education.

Break your beard in right.

Right now your beard is in the formative stage.

You can shave it with a razor blade like your father does. And each time you do your beard will grow back a little more difficult. Until one day shaving's no longer a chore. It's an agony.

Look no further than your father's face for proof.

But fortunately, you're catching your beard at an early age. You can break it in to be just as shaveable 10 and 20 years from now as it is today.

With a REMINGTON® shaver.

And if you think the kind of shave we're selling won't be close enough for you, you're wrong.

Our new blades are sharper than anything that's been in an electric shaver before. And there's a dial that lets you adjust them for your skin and beard.

What's more, you can dial a REMINGTON electric shaver into a sideburn trimmer.

Admittedly, it costs more to buy our electric shaver than a razor and some blades.

But it's a good investment.

These next few years will determine how you and your beard will get along for the rest of your lives. †SPERRY RAND® ©1969 S. R.

Frank Howard, Athletic Director and Head Football Coach

Howard's Career Varied . . .

College football is 100 years old this year, and even though there are people who will tell you that this is Frank Howard's 100th year at Clemson, they are just a little off base.

Howard is now in his 39th year on the Clemson campus, and 29 of those seasons, he has been the "Papa Tiger" of all those who have come to play under the purple and orange.

There are a dozen active coaches in the country who have won over 100 games. Howard is in fourth spot in this list of 12 and he and three others can claim 150 or more victories.

The listing at the right shows that Howard has completed 29 seasons, and no one in the nation is closer than five years to him. He is the dean of all active coaches and can lay claim to 161 victories.

Howard has either played or coached in every major bowl. The San Francisco East-West game, Montgomery's Blue-Gray and the North-South in Miami have all employed him for their post-season classics. Next January he'll go to Honolulu to coach in the Hula Bowl.

There has not been a facet of football Howard hasn't touched from the Pee Wee League on up. Football has brought Howard fame and Howard has brought honor to the game. He was a voting member for three years on the powerful rules committee and has served on many other committees making the game a better one for the ones who play it and for those who watch it.

The 1969 season is Howard's 43rd with collegiate football. Conference championships and coach-of-the-year awards have come his way, he can talk of bowl victories and All-American players.

Football is his life, not just 10 Saturdays a year.

Our business is textiles. But we're a people company, too.

Springs has always been known for the importance it attaches to people. This attitude shows in our profit-sharing plans, our system of 26 employee cafeterias, our medical program with five full-time doctors and 28 registered nurses who staff a dozen medical clinics. And in many other ways.

Out of this concern for people has grown a strong feeling of mutual respect. Don't take our word for it. Ask the 19,500 people who work in Springs' 22 plants in North and South Carolina.

The Role of Football

When we speak of Gamecock football in South Carolina, we're not talking about a sport, a single game or one season. We're referring to a perpetual state of mind among all the citizens of this State. Football reflects the spirit of this University. Win, lose or draw, our football team gives its all for the glory of the University. At the same time, the color, the excitement and even the anticipation of a game or a season unites all the constituencies of this University in its drive to give outstanding service to South Carolina. As a result, excellence in higher education is constantly encouraged, even demanded. The football program on this campus is a treasured part of our University life. Collegiate football in general is one of the exciting facets of American life. We salute all those who participate.

Dr. Thomas F. Janes
President, University of South Carolina

Football has a special role in the athletic program of the University of Virginia. This demanding game is played here with the same healthy enthusiasm shown by the participants in the many other sports in our program, but the great public interest in football magnifies the University's team as representatives of the University generally. Because football of the University of Virginia is played excitingly and competitively by a group of fine young men whose academic accomplishments equal and often exceed those of their classmates, football is today a special asset for the University.

Dr. Edgar F. Shannon, Jr.
President, University of Virginia

Football has meant many things to the University since the first game was played in 1888. Through the years it has provided the participants with an outstanding program of physical fitness and afforded them the advantages of intercollegiate competition with teams throughout the country. Equally important, it has engendered an esprit de corps among the student body, the alumni and our other friends in the State that is rarely equalled in the sports world. Football at Chapel Hill has been and will continue to be an important part of the University's total program. On the playing field, in classrooms, and in laboratories, the University strives for excellence.

Dr. J. Carlyle Sitterson
Chancellor, University of North Carolina

At Clemson University, football and other intercollegiate sports form an integral part of the institution's educational program. All athletic policies rest on this foundation. Among Clemson alumni, many of the most successful participated in football and other sports while in college. The lessons of team competition and discipline, combined with their studies in classroom and laboratory, equipped them for eminence in life. Each year Clemson awards the Norris Medal to an outstanding member of the graduating class. Four of the last five winners have been athletes. Could there be stranger testimony to the educational value of sports?

Dr. Robert C. Edwards
President, Clemson University

Intercollegiate football is an exhilarating part of the American culture, as expected as is September, October, November and New Year's Day. No longer does the sport dominate any campus in the Nation if it ever did really. But persistently it brings together diverse portions of a university's "family" and of its diverse "publics," all for a happy reason. This is true of football at North Carolina State University. Despite football's spectator-entertainment pull, and hidden beneath its public exhibition, is the molding of a young man's life. For some of them their ability and love of the game have usefully become their passport to a fine education. Football at North Carolina State University is big business, is good for player and spectator alike — and is great fun!

Dr. John T. Caldwell
Chancellor, North Carolina State

Football is a part of the intercollegiate athletic program. As a major sport, it has made a valuable contribution to the physical and mental development of the participants, to the enjoyment of millions of spectators, and to the general welfare of the colleges and universities. Collegiate football has been a prominent and vital part of American life, and it has provided a means of identifying with an institution, both for the students and the alumni. It has been a rallying point for all of the university's constituencies. In general, the football program has been supportive of the broad educational aims of the educational institutions. It has emphasized competition, the will to win, the desire to excel and it has provided good wholesome entertainment.

Dr. Wilson H. Elkins
President, University of Maryland

Probably the classic lesson of high caliber football is discipline. Just as a classic quality of a strong and compassionate society is discipline. Football and society succeed because of this trait, and it may be that even spectators at football games can learn from the sacrifices that good team must make. Intercollegiate football brings together various segments of Wake Forest University. In this "reunion" of students, faculty, alumni and other friends of the University there is another opportunity for all of us to learn that mankind is a sort of unwieldy team that must learn to work together. It seems to me that members of the Atlantic Coast Conference have learned to discipline themselves to form a strong conference that keeps athletics in proper perspective, and that members of the Conference have a happy and profitable record of working together. Football and Conference participation at this high level are a credit to Wake Forest.

The Alabama Series

Today is the 13th game between Clemson and Alabama, but it's only the second one to be played in the friendly confines of Death Valley.

The game today ends a four-year contract with the Tide in which 'Bama has won the first three by scores of 26-0, 13-10 and 21-14.

The rival head coaches today, Paul "Bear" Bryant of Alabama and Frank Howard of Clemson, each played their football for the Crimson Tide and each has become a legend in his time.

Another person also at the top of his field, but who could buy both Howard and Bryant, is also on campus today for a big show in Littlejohn Coliseum tonight at 8 o'clock.

The name — Bob Hope, who has been known as a sparring partner for Bryant on the golf course. Howard has volunteered to be the caddy in case these two want to get in a quick 18. And wouldn't that be some conversation to have on tape.

But down to the more serious business at hand — football.

In 'Bama's last visit to Clemson two years ago, the Tide had a close call when two missed field goals and a crucial penalty on a play, which would have given the Tigers a first down at the Alabama one-yard line, staved off a Clemson threat and gave Alabama a 13-10 triumph.

The Tigers went to Tuscaloosa last year and played the Gator Bowl-bound Tide almost to a standstill before losing, 21-14.

The Tigers made a great comeback after being down, 14-0, at the end of the first quarter. The Tide turned a Billy Ammons interception into a TD with 6:22 left in the opening period. And less than five minutes later, Alabama put another score on the board after recovering a Clemson fumble on the Tide 36.

A drive covering 65 yards netted Clemson a touchdown late in the second period when Buddy Gore went off left tackle for three yards and it was a 14-7 half.

Clemson took the second half kickoff and in eight plays covered 74 yards, with Ammons passing to Ray Yauger six yards for a score which knotted the count at 14-all.

Another Clemson fumble at its own 30 put the Tide in business and on the first play Scott Hunter passed to George Ranager for the winning TD.

Clemson later drove to the Tide 27 but with 1:37 left, another interception killed the Tigers' last hopes of the day.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

CLEMSON UNDERSCORES EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

One of the primary responsibilities of a true university is to provide a thoroughly diversified selection of academic curricula for its entire student body. Clemson University recently underscored its educational objectives with the creation of the College of Liberal Arts, one of two new academic units designed to strengthen and enrich University programs.

Because of rapid growth, increased enrollment, and expanded graduate programs in the arts and sciences, the College of Arts and Sciences was divided last July to form the College of Liberal Arts and the College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences.

The College of Liberal Arts, headed by Dean H. M. Cox, comprises the Departments of English, Modern Languages, Music and Social Sciences. D. W. Daniel Hall and Strode Tower provide classroom and office space for liberal arts students and faculty.

The Department of English provides professional training for undergraduate students in the English major program and for graduate students seeking master's degrees. Plans are already under way in this area to initiate additional programs at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, including a doctoral degree program.

The Department of Modern Languages offers major concentrations in French, Spanish and German for undergraduate students. Course offerings on the graduate level are anticipated, with a sizeable number of graduate students by 1975.

Courses offered by the Department of Music include Music Appreciation, the History of Music, Music In the Elementary School, and Music Theory. An interdisciplinary program leading to a minor in Fine Arts is presently available, and plans for a major concentration in music are in progress.

The Department of Social Sciences provides undergraduate degree programs in History, Political Science, Psychology, and Sociology. Additional degree programs under consideration include Geography, Philosophy, and Social Work.

The Department of Social Sciences also offers a master's degree program in U. S. History and is anticipating a doctoral degree program in World History.

University of Alabama Football Players . . .

Clemson's 1969 Cheerleaders Follow The Tigers . . .

THE DEMAND IS GREAT FOR CLEMSON GRADUATES

Clemson University graduates, especially those with some specialized preparation, continue to be one of South Carolina's most sought after professionals. Over 2,000 employers have used the College Placement Annual to list their career opportunities for seniors this year. Employers sent 455 representatives on campus for 3,570 personal interviews.

D. Greg Hughes, Clemson Placement Director, reports the number of bachelor's offers went up 11 per cent over last year. Starting salary offers averaged $819 for graduates in technical curricula, while others were $711. Throughout the country there were 27,565 technical offers and 9,301 for those in non-technical curricula. At the graduate level master's offers were down 35 per cent and the doctoral volume dropped 31 per cent, he notes.

"The shortage of college graduates in science and engineering is becoming more serious each year," Mr. Hughes explains. "A change in priorities from space and defense to transportation and pollution, or housing and health, will not lessen the demand for college trained specialists. The opportunities for these graduates appear to be unlimited."

ACC Comments: Where Are They Now?

Lou Sossamon

BOB KENNEL, N. C. State: This former New Bern, N. C., native is now associate director of the NIKE Program Office of the Aerospace Corp. of San Bernardino, Calif. He was a straight "A" student at N. C. State in nuclear engineering. Aside from being a letterman end in football (1955-56), Kennel was All-NCAA District III as a catcher in baseball (1956) when he batted .415 and was All-ACC in both 1957 and 1958. He passed up a pro baseball contract for post-graduate study in New Zealand. At Aerospace Corp. he is responsible for all underground nuclear tests on Air Force ballistic missiles and re-entry vehicles. Bob was dubbed "Slide-Rule" by his Wolfpack teammates.

LOU SOSSAMON, South Carolina: Lou Sossamon was a second team All-American center at the University of South Carolina in 1942, climaxing a brilliant career with the Gamecocks by serving as a co-captain during his senior season. After graduation, Sossamon continued as a football star with the strong Bainbridge, Md., Navy team during World War II, and later in professional football. Where is he now? Lou Sossamon is publisher of the Gaffney Ledger, the newspaper in his hometown of Gaffney, S. C., and is president of the South Carolina Press Association. Meanwhile, there's another Sossamon, also a center, on the Gamecock horizon. Son, Cody, an All-State selection at Gaffney High last fall, is a South Carolina freshman this fall.

Harry Rabenhorst

STAN LAVINE, Maryland: The name Stan Lavine occupies a prominent place in Maryland football records. On October 29, 1949, quarterback Lavine passed to halfback Ed Bolton, who thrilled a Homecoming Day crowd with a dash to the end zone. The pass and run covered 92 yards, longest ever for Maryland. Starring for a team that won nine of ten games in 1949, Lavine was the leading scorer as well as the leading passer. Today he is on the sidelines: Dr. Stan Lavine, a noted orthopedic surgeon and Maryland team physician.

HARRY RABENHORST, Wake Forest: Harry Rabenhorst, who back in 1919 made football history by punting a football 115 yards in a game against N. C. State, was recently retired as Director of Athletics at Louisiana State University. He served the Baton Rouge, La., school for 43 years. During his undergraduate days at Wake Forest, he served as coach of the team as well as being a star performer. On the day of his retirement he advised the younger generation to engage in competitive sports for the disciplinary value. "We need competitors for this is a competitive world; and we can get along with fewer protestors," he urged. Rabenhorst and his wife, the former Nell Adams of Wake Forest, N. C., are now making their retirement home in Baton Rouge.

Bob Sharpe

ART WEINER, North Carolina: Art Weiner, who ranks as the greatest pass-catcher in University of North Carolina football history, now is making a big name for himself in another field. He's a vice president with Burlington Industries, the largest textile mill in the country. Weiner makes his home in Greensboro, N. C., where the executive offices of Burlington Industries are located. It was in 1949 that Weiner set the Carolina school record with 57 catches. That record never has been broken. Strangely, Weiner came to Carolina on a basketball scholarship, but never played a minute on the court. Instead, he teamed with Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice to spark the Tar Heels to bowl games three times.

BOB SHARPE, Clemson: Bob Sharpe was a member of Clemson's first bowl team, appearing in the 1940 Cotton Bowl at Dallas. He served as captain of the 1940 club and was the starting center on both the 1939 and 1940 teams. He served in World War II, being discharged with the rank of major, and since that time has worked in the textile field. He is currently stationed as plant manager of the huge Wamsutta Mills near Anderson, S. C. Wamsutta is billed as the "longest textile plant in the world" being a half-mile long. Over 68,000,000 square yards of fabric are produced yearly at Wamsutta—enough to reach one-fourth of the way to the moon.

Joe Palumbo

JAY WILKINSON, Duke: Here's what the former Blue Devil grid star has to say about his present job: "This past January, I became a Staff Assistant in the White House, reporting directly to Mr. Bob Haldeman, assistant to the President. My duties include general administrative staff work with particular emphasis on communication and information. In June of 1968, I joined the Nixon campaign as National Director of Commitment '68, a program designed to attract the votes of Independents and Democrats from the ages of 21 to 35. After my graduation from Duke, I spent three years at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass., and received a Bachelor of Divinity degree. Although I was ordained as a Deacon, I spent one year in the office of Gov. Dewey F. Bartlett of Oklahoma as his executive assistant."

JOE PALUMBO, Virginia: Desire was his keynote, aggression his trademark. At 5-10, 198 pounds Joe Palumbo was a unanimous first-team guard selection on the 1951 AP All-American team. The transition from a soft-spoken leader on campus to the fearsome package of gridiron explosive captured football enthusiasts by the thousands. Originally from Beaver, Pa., Joe settled in Charlottesville following his service duties. Today he is president of Colter Corporation which is engaged in insurance, mortgage and real estate work. He represents numerous life insurance companies and is a life-time member of the Million Dollar Round Table.

The people in this building are giving away atomic "secrets."

They're letting people spy on huge nuclear reactors.

They're revealing the secrets of the atom to all who come in.

And they're not stopping there.

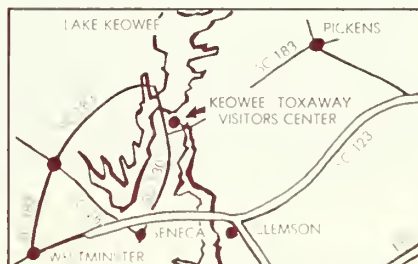

They're taking people from the past to the future. Through display chambers filled with sight and sound.

They're telling people how electricity is made. How it's going to change our world.

And they're doing all this free of charge. At the Keowee-Toxaway Visitors

NEW CAMPUS BUILDINGS: James C. Littlejohn Coliseum (1); Schilletter Hall, East Campus cafeteria (2); Strade Tower for faculty offices (3); Manning and Lever Halls, East Campus dormitories (4); D. W. Daniel Hall, classroom building (5); Sam R. Rhodes Engineering Research Center (6).

Up, Up And Away

Construction cranes are challenging Tillman Hall clock tower as the symbol of Clemson University.

During the past several years, towering cranes have overlooked at least five major expansions at the University:

—Two modern high-rise dormitories, Manning and Lever halls, each of which houses 432 students.

—Multimillion-dollar James C. Littlejohn Coliseum, the spacious new home of the Clemson basketball team which also serves as focal point for campus entertainment and academic events.

—Schilletter Hall, the East Campus dining facility which accommodates 2,000 students at a single meal.

—Redfern Health Center, a modern 34-bed hospital and campus infirmary.

Recently completed or to be completed soon are three major buildings designed to advance the frontiers of knowledge at Clemson and in the state. These are D. W. Daniel Hall, a classroom building for English and Modern Languages; Strade Tower, an adjoining 10-story faculty office tower; and the Sam R. Rhodes Engineering Research Center whose space and laboratories will be primarily devoted to health related graduate education and research programs.

When students met classes on August 22 for the first day of the Fall semester, additional new construction was under way. A third high-rise residence hall to help house the steadily-increasing enrollment is emerging from its East Campus location.

These facilities represent the initial stage of a $60 million building program that will dramatically affect every phase of University activity. Other vitally needed additions to the campus are in the planning stages, with target dates set for completion.

Major immediate needs include a University Union building, a student activities building, a new building to provide adequate space and laboratory facilities for the biological sciences, an urgently needed facility to accommodate a critical overflow in the School of Architecture, and a building to house the forestry department.

In addition, major renovations on several existing buildings and more housing for single and married students are planned.

Greater Spartanburg is a little greater because of us.

When the Chamber of Commerce of Greater Spartanburg built a new building, it was built out of Boren Brick.

Whenever an entire association of business and professional people can get together on one product, it says something for that product.

Happily for us, the brick they got together on was ours.

If the Chamber of Commerce of Greater Spartanburg is a little greater because of us, then we're a little greater because of it.

Clemson Is Tiger Country

Clemson University is located in the northwest corner of the state, but its educational, research and public service programs extend from the red hills of the Blue Ridge Mountains to the sandy coast of the Atlantic Ocean.

Founded as one of the nation's land-grant universities, Clemson opened in 1893 with 15 faculty members, 446 students, four buildings, two barns and six silos.

Today Clemson University is a center of scientific, technological and liberal education in the state.

Main campus enrollment has grown to almost 6,800 young men and women, including nearly 700 graduate students. Some 400 additional undergraduate students are attending two-year programs at centers in Greenville and Sumter. The faculty numbers over 600. The main campus has 55 buildings on 600 acres.

Teaching and research at Clemson University cover studies as down to earth as soil and plant analysis and as far out as celestial navigation.

Instruction programs are offered through 40 academic departments under eight undergraduate colleges and school: Agriculture and Biological Sciences, Architecture, Education, Engineering, Liberal Arts, Industrial Management and Textile Science, Physical and Mathematical Sciences, and Nursing.

Clemson conducts research projects ranging from ceramic bone implants to oxygen consumption in the brain and from a disposable glass container to water pollution.

The research and academic know-how at Clemson work as catalytic agents to the entire economy and life of South Carolina -- through the Agricultural Extension Service, the Agricultural Experiment Stations, the Professional Development Program and the Office of Industrial and Municipal Relations.

The IPTAY Story

The Clemson IPTAY Club is now in its 36th year of operation. As Chris Suber, president, recently said, "In looking back over the past 35 years and noting the progress that IPTAY has made, I cannot help but be thankful for all of the people, both friends and graduates of Clemson University, who have made this progress possible.

"In any organization of this size and age, we find a few unhappy members; however, the percentage is very small and in most cases, the unhappiness is short lived.

"Nothing that can be done creates more happiness than to have winning teams. This we hope to have with the continuing help of IPTAY."

IPTAY was born for just one purpose—to finance athletic scholarships at Clemson. That is still the way IPTAY is run today. The money received by the club is used solely for scholarships.

During the season just closed there were 6,963 regular ($20) members, 1,219 $100 Gold Card members, 26 in the $500 category and 11 who gave $1,000.

The 1968-69 year, which came to a close September 1, has been the most successful financial year in IPTAY history. The increase in contributions amounted to about 35 per cent above the best previous year.

To have a successful drive each year, much planning goes into organizing during each summer. South Carolina is broken down into six districts, each with a director, who also may be an officer in IPTAY. Each district has a group of representatives and here the number of representatives depend on the population, or territory to be covered.

The main concern of the representatives is to see that a successful membership drive is carried out each year. The method of each person differs in that some areas stage short, intensive annual drives and others keep up the peace year round.

Directors and representatives serve as a liaison between Clemson and their particular area. IPTAY, with its district directors and representatives, working with loyal Clemson friends, is a close-knit, hard-hitting organization when its forces are marshalled for a fight to help Clemson.

Anyone, regardless of alma mater or age who is interested in seeing the Tigers retain a respected ranking in their athletic endeavors, can become a member of IPTAY by contributing $20 or more a year. All money contributed is tax deductible.

A contribution to IPTAY is an investment in the future. IPTAY "alumni" are its best advertisement. IPTAY has had a bright past. Its future is just as glowing.
